A Unifying Voice in the Name of Jesus Christ for the Mission of the Gospel and the Wholeness of Communities

Find Your Neighborhood Ministerium with Our New Local Ecumenical Directory

Within the ten counties served by Christian Associates of Southwest Pennsylvania, there are scores of local ecumenical expressions, such as neighborhood ministeriums, community social service agencies, and clergy support groups.

This month, Christian Associates is publishing a freshly updated online database to help resource and connect these local groups. You can visit the new directory at www.casp.org/localecumenism.

This new directory uses contemporary technology to make this information more accessible than ever before. Using a Google Map, the directory shows the location and contact information for ecumenical organizations throughout our region.

Dean Baldwin, Christian Associates' new student assistant, is leading the project. A native of New York state, Dean is currently completing his MA in Religion at Trinity School for Ministry. This summer, he will be traveling to the Solomon Islands on mission with SAMS-USA.

"I see the map as just the beginning," Dean said. "Next, we can gather qualitative data to discern best practices for local Christian partnerships, and eventually we can convene local ecumenical leaders to share ideas. The hope is that this data and assessment can help CASP to be a better resource to local ecumenical expressions."

To add your local ecumenical expression to the database, or to make any corrections to the information you see posted online, contact Dean: dean.baldwin@tsm.edu or 315-806-8940. After May 31, please call the Christian Associates office at 412-688-9070.

Pastoral Care Conference Equips Healthy Clergy, Congregations, and Neighborhoods

Healthy congregations need healthy pastors.

That's the theme of this year's Pittsburgh Pastoral Care Conference, which has invited Pastor Dave Kornfield, an international leader in the field of clergy wellness, to serve as keynote speaker.

Pastor Kornfield, is the founder of MAPI (Mentoring and Accountability for Pastoral Integrity), an inter-denominational ministry in Brazil that has grown to provide pastoral care for thousands of pastors in Portugal, Bolivia, Paraguay, Venezuela, Colombia, and Western Africa. He works with the World Evangelical Alliance as the coordinator of the Pastoring of Pastors task force.

Now in its seventeenth year, the Pittsburgh Pastoral Care Conference brings together clergy, counselors, social workers, and others who are interested in care for persons in our region. Christian Associates is among the diverse organizations represented on the planning team.

In addition to plenary presentations, conference participants will also select three workshops, which include sessions on:

- the opiate epidemic;
- care for the incarcerated;
- coping with trauma;
- ministry with teenagers;
- dementia;
- eating disorders, and
- spiritual direction, among other topics.

The conference will take place on Friday, May 5 from 8 a.m. to 4 p.m. at Christ Church at Grove Farm, 249 Duff Rd, Sewickley.

For registration and more information, visit the Conference Web site, www.pghpc.org.

REFLECTIONS ALONG THE WAY

Dear friends,

Jesus tells a parable about workers in a vineyard. When evening comes, the workers who began their labors earliest – spending hours in the sun on their feet, hauling heavy baskets of grapes – receive the usual daily wage for their efforts. But the workers who started in the late afternoon receive the very same compensation.

Christian Associates is beginning to look toward our 50th anniversary in 2020. It's been a long day in the hot sun for us, reaping an ecumenical harvest. We have worked diligently for decades to make the unity of the church more visible in our region. We have built relationships and established programs. We can be justifiably proud of our efforts and their results.

But we are not the only laborers in this vineyard any more.

In recent months, new voices have come into the ecumenical conversation in our region. Bishop David Zubik of the Roman Catholic Diocese of Pittsburgh and Reid Carpenter, founder and President Emeritus of the Pittsburgh Leadership Foundation, have been convening local Christian leaders in the "Reunion" project, a series of worship and fellowship gatherings. Pastors of independent churches have prayed side by side with denominational leaders. We've been encouraged to knock on the door of a church we've never entered before, to introduce ourselves to its leaders, to ask, "How can I pray for you?" and to invite those new friends to the next Reunion meeting. The circle has expanded. New relationships are underway.

The Holy Spirit is stirring up a new movement toward unity here in our region. It springs up in new and surprising places.

In February, I was pleased to meet Julie Van Gorp and Jamie Shaver, hosts of "True View," an evangelical television ministry, who feel led to work for Christian unity. Their genuine curiosity and openness, and their deep prayerfulness, have already been a blessing to me. On November 4, Julie and Jamie will be launching "The One Project," a movement to bring women of faith together across racial and denominational barriers; you can learn more at www.trueviewministries.com/events.

The Christian Associates Council went on retreat in early March at Kearns Spirituality Center in Allison Park. As part of our ongoing conversation on membership, we invited a panel of leaders from independent churches, and church bodies not currently involved in Christian Associates, to join us, sharing their perspectives on Christian unity. We were all edified and encouraged by this conversation, and even surprised by what we heard.

Of course, sometimes these new connections can feel uncomfortable. Too often we think of one other as competitors, fighting for our own share in the shrinking market of church. Sometimes we are not sure if our own theological stances and liturgical practices – or even our own identities (of gender, race, orientation) – will be fully welcome in these conversations. Sometimes these encounters remind us of painful schisms affecting our own churches.

But if we push beyond discomfort, we can find amazing grace. The Holy Spirit is stirring up a new movement toward unity here in our region. It springs up in new and surprising places. It seeks to reach true healing, not superficial connection. If we can come along, it may bring us closer to the oneness Jesus desires for us.

At the end of the day, whether we've been working in this vineyard for fifty years or for fifty days, God will reward us for our labor. But we might also see a reward even in the midst of our efforts, as we turn toward the strangers who are our fellow workers and ask, "How can I pray for you?"

Workshop Equips Christians to Work to End Hunger

In today's political climate, it is crucial for Christians to advocate effectively on behalf of the most vulnerable in our communities. The Western Pennsylvania chapter of Bread for the World has designed this year's hunger advocacy workshop to prepare us for this challenge.

The annual workshop will take place in the Kadel Dining Room at Pittsburgh Theological Seminary (616 N. Highland Ave, Pittsburgh) on Sunday, April 23 from 1-4 p.m.

Bread for the World's Regional Organizer for Pennsylvania and New Jersey, Sheena advocate for people facing food insecurity in our own communities and around the world.

A plenary presentation, "Innovative Strategies for Food Insecurity," will show us how advocates are working to end hunger in rural areas, high schools, and universities.

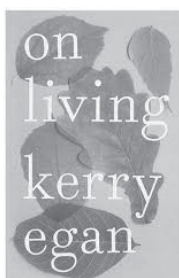

Rolle, will speak about Bread's plans to advocate for a "zero hunger budget." Ms. Rolle will help us decode the federal budget process so that we can most effectively

Participants can also choose from three workshops that will teach how to organize an "offering of letters" in your congregation, how churches can participate in summer food programs for children, or how to effectively communicate with your Congressional representatives in this polarized political landscape.

The workshop is free of charge. Advance registration is strongly preferred; participants can visit the Eventbrite site at <http://bit.ly/Bread2017> or by calling Christian Associates at 412-688-9070.

Author To Speak on "Spiritual Work of Dying"

Hospice chaplain and author, Kerry Egan

Hospice chaplain Kerry Egan, author of On Living (Riverhead, 2016), will be the featured speaker at a luncheon for clergy and lay leaders on Thursday, April 27 from noon to 2 p.m. at the Family Hospice Auditorium, 50 Moffett Street, in Pittsburgh.

Ms. Egan will speak on the "spiritual work of dying" – the work of finding or making meaning of one's life, the experiences it's contained, and the people who have touched it. She will explore the role of clergy and lay leaders in working with people at the end of life.

The Rev. Dr. Daniel E. Hall, a general surgeon and Episcopal priest, will respond to Egan's remarks.

The $25 registration fee includes lunch and a copy of On Living. The event is sponsored by Family Hospice and UPMC.

To register, contact Lynn Helbling Sirinek at 412-572-8874 or lhsirinek@familyhospicePA.org, no later than April 20.

"Let Justice Roll Down Like Waters ..."

*The River Jordan. The Sea of Galilee. The flood.
The desert rains. The waters of baptism.*

The image of water suffuses the scriptures, and the importance of this imagery spurs Christians to action. With rising oceans, dirty drinking water, and polluted watersheds all in the news, how should Christians think about water theologically? And how do we move into action?

For over forty years, Trinity Episcopal Church in New York has brought together scholars and theologians for the annual Trinity Institute, exploring issues that matter through a theological lens.

On April 28 and 29, St. Paul's Episcopal Church in Mt. Lebanon will be a partner site for this annual conference, known as Trinity Institute. This year's theme is Water Justice.

Speakers at the conference include U.S. Senator Barbara Boxer, experts on public policy and climate change, and two Anglican archbishops: Winston Halapua of the Diocese of Polynesia and Aotearoa New Zealand and Thabo Makgoba of Cape Town, South Africa.

Trinity Institute at St. Paul's offers video presentations from the speakers in New York, conversation in small groups, and terrific meals. In addition, those who participate will have access to other materials offered by Trinity Institute throughout the year, including study programs for Lent and Advent, and short films and small courses to share with your congregation.

For more information, or to register, visit <http://www.stpaulspgh.org/blog/trinity-institute-2017-water-justice/> To learn more about the conference in New York, visit www.ti2017.org

2017 Annual Conference: Kingdom vs. Empire

Dates: Fri., June 16 - Sun., June 18
Speaker: Pastor Joel Repic, Crestmont Alliance Church
Cost: Residential - $195; Non-residential - $145; $50 per person non-refundable deposit.

Jesus inaugurated the Kingdom of God on earth in His ministry, but without ending the kingdom of darkness. This means we live in a time when Kingdom and empire both exist on the earth in proximity to one another. How do we discern the difference between Kingdom and empire in our society, our neighborhoods, our churches, and our own hearts?
